“Pinter has never written anything simpler, sadder or funnier than Betrayal...Pinter tunnels backward in time, starting the play with a meeting between his adulterous lovers, Jerry and Emma, in 1977, two years after their seven year affair has died. In nine scenes we move back through the stages of the affair, until the play ends with its beginning in the house of Emma’s husband Robert, who is Jerry’s best friend. It’s like watching a flower blossom backward, its petals inexorably closing.” – Newsweek, 27 November 1978.
